We'll be covering ...

- The nature and scope of online predatory conduct
 - What online activities do sexual predators conduct and who tends to be targeted?
 - Is this a new problem or just a new form of an old one, and what lessons should we learn from the past?
 - How does technology facilitate these crimes and amplify the injuries inflicted?
- How cyber sexual predation is being addressed today
 - What are the current state and federal laws covering non-consensual pornography, sextortion, and other crimes? What are the gaps in the law and resources?
 - How are lawyers using the law creatively to address shortcomings in the law?
- What can/should be done to address it better
 - What technological and legal challenges need to be addressed?
 - Can better remedies for victims be created?
- Where you can go for help if you are a victim

What if it happens to me?

- Don't engage, but don't delete.
- Create a timeline of all events
- Preserve both sides of communications—victim's and offender's
- Save all photos in native format because they may have meta data
- Take screen shots of everything, with dates and times
- Don't delete hacked accounts without talking to LE first
- Contact local and federal law enforcement
